In commercial circles there was not much business transacted. An apparently unfounded report relative to the flour trade caused a good deal of inquiry, but, so far as we could learn, there is not the slightest grounds of suspicion that it refers to any of the Sydney dealers. Another subject of co-was a statement in a Melbourne paper of was a statement in a Melbourne paper of Satur-day last, that a Sydney house in the grocery line was in difficulties. Where these rumours originated from it is hard to tell, but it is well to know that they have no foundation in fact. Breadstuffs remain dulland dealers are working off their old stocks rather than buy in the face of a falling market; flour was quoted at £12 10s. to £14; wheat, at 5s. to 6s. There was light trade inquiry for liquors, with sales of constand rum at 2s. 3d.: Lowndes' at 3s. 9d.: Queensland rum at 2s. 3d.; Lowndes' at 3s. 9d.; Royal Blend whisky in demand, and held for higher prices. Three star brandy on the spot is scarce, and worth about 46s. 9d., but to arrive 46s, would be accepted. Hennessy's case has a moderate trade sale at 32s. Late telegrams from Mauritius re-port that nothing had left or was loading for Sydney, and that the sugar market was extremely firm, and bare of most descriptions. One or two lines of new tea changed hands to-day on pri-vate terms, said to denend on the result of vate terms, said to depend on the result of Gunga is very little over 800 packages, instead of the wat reported in this morning's issue.

The quarterly returns of revenue, receipts, expenditure, &c., have been issued at an unprecedentedly early date. It is the first time in the colonies that they have been published within a day of the close of the three months they refer to. The receipts amounted to £1,167,830 against £1,612,327 for the second quarter of 1877, or a comparative decrease of £344,496. Locking at the totals only it would seem as if there was a falling off in the revenue, but in reality this is hardly the case. We have repeatedly pointed out that the money received for the sale of public lands is not rightly designated revenue, and it is to this source that the apparent decrease is traceable. In the June quarter of 1877 "sales" yielded $701,155 as against £321,238 for last quarter, when under the auction sales alone there was a decrease of £426,830. This was once of the effects of a stringent money market. The heads which may be looked upon as legitimate sources of revenue present estisfactory returns. Thus in the Customs we have receipts amounting to £301,159, an increase of £32,347; in railways, £216,294, an increase of £21,873; and in rents, interest, &c., an increase of £35,141; piletage and harbour dues yielded e. £2765: the Postmaster-General's 20710—increase, 52700; the Postmater-General department collected 553,840—increase, £1070; licenses, £78,384—increase, £2257; fees of office, £9701—increase, £505; fines and forfettures, £250-increase, £250; and miscellaneous receipts, £34,334— an increase of £9271, arising chiefly from the larger an increase of $5971, ansing chiefly from the larger amount derived from interest on bank deposits, Next to land sales, the largest and only decrease worth mentioning was in the duty on refined sugar, which was less by $3463. In rents, exclusive of land, there is an apparent falling off of £4291, but this is attributable to the fact that the abolition of tolks deprived the revenue of £4488.

Sheep diseases Act contributions fell off to the extent of £1125; this, however, is a special fund for a special object. Taken as a whole, the revenue has been better than it appears at the first glance. The receipts on account of Trust funds amounted to £433.431—a net increase of £110,936;

Against the receipts mentioned there has been an aggregate expenditure of £2,099,815, of which £1,645,661 was on account of Consolidated Revenue. On 31st March last the actual cash balance at credit of the latter was £2,500,687; to-day it was reduced £2,119,856. Of the difference between the two amounts, £100,000 was advanced to leans under 40 and 41 Victoria. The amount of meney on special deposits in the various banks has not been altered during the quarter, but the balance at credit of the Tondon sentent but the balance at credit of the Tondon sentent but the balance at credit altered during the quarter, but the balance at credit of the London account has been reduced from $1,018,972 to $716,409, and that in the Bank of New South Wales, Sydney, from £663,230 to £443,083. From the Melbourne Argus of Saturday, we learn that at the meeting of creditors in the estate of Messra. LENDING MONEY TO SELECTORS.—The Argus of Saturday states that the Government of Victoria is understood to be maturing a scheme for advancing money, out of a loan, to the selectors. The proposal is be of a comparatively moderate character, as it is recognised that the first steps must be experimental. Any action of the kind involves, however, a new departure, both in the land system and the social economy of the colony.

admitting the general aim or the resolutions those who won them. Those who loss who loss who means for its attainment, and whether the effect of passing the resolutions has not been to fetter the discretion of the Government. Such a speech, if delivered in Parliament, when the resolutions were under consideration, might have led the House to pause before passing them, or to content itself with a general affirmation of principle, and a direction to the mation of principle, and a direction to the scholarsaips should be offered only to most pupils at the Grammar schools or approved private schools, who had been sent up from the primary schools of the State. It is true, as he says, that no such intention is expressed in Mr. Winderer's resolutions; and more consideration should be given to the subject than has been given before this principle of limitation is adopted. The less we have of legislation for the principle of the pri tion for special classes the better. The broader the foundations of all our public institu-tions the better. And if it is considered wise policy for the State to establish University points for the State to establish University scholarships in connection with State Grammar Schools, or (until they become more numerous) in connection with approved private schools of corresponding character, the less the competition for those scholarships is narrowed by class restrictions the better. Sir WILLIAM MANNING appears to assume that the selection of the State in each blicking at the sele object of the State in establishing the double system of scholarships would be to give a University education to boys who had begun their career in the primary schools of the State. But there ought to be a clear anderstanding whether that is or is not the true view of the case. Is it not rather, or should it not be, the object of the State, in offering these scholarships to competition, to bring to the front special ability in whatever class it may show itself, and to provide means class it may show itself, and to provide means whereby that special ability may be cultivated and developed in the public interest? If it be so, it matters little whether the competitor in a secondary school began his carcer in a State primary school, or was taught at home by his parents. The scholarships are to be won at competitive examinations; and the way to ensure their bestowal upon the schoolars best fitted to turn them to proft is to throw the competition open to all in the schools. If the competition were confined to a few boys in each school, the best might be excluded, the highest ability might be left without encouragement or culture, and the funds of the Stato might be expended with comparatively small be expended with comparatively small promise of result. On the other hand if the boys of greatest ability and promise the boys of greatest ability and promise happened to be amongst the few sent up from the State primary schools, they would suffer nothing by the open competition. On the contrary they might gain by feeling the greater stimulus to diligence and effort.

In granting encouragement and support to secondary education, the State occupies different ground from that on which it stands in maintaining primary schools. The business of primary education is undertaken by the State because it is a source of danger to the State because it is a source of danger to the State that any considerable proportion of the people should be without it, and because experience has shown that the interference osperence and shown that the interference of the State is the only sure means of obviating this danger. But it is not so in the matter of secondary education and the higher culture. The State does not recognise the necessity of providing these for the mass of the people, as a measure of self-defence. The distinction is made obvious when the test of compulsion is expliced. It is a practicular of compulsion is applied. It is a practicable thing to require a whole population to learn to read and write, but to suggest that every-body should be compelled to graduate at a university would be absurd. The two at a university would be absurd. The two things stand on different grounds. It is strongly held by some that when the State has relieved itself of the risk of having an utterly untaught social residuum, by establish-ing a national system of primary education, its work is done. There are others who hold as strongly that it is the wisdom of the State not only to provide against threatened danger, but to provide for the accomplishment of positive good. The catablishment of the University and the foundation of the Gram mar School by the State were works of the latter class; and it is to be observed that they were undertaken as methods of promoting the best interests of the community, befor the expediency of providing some security against social and political danger by universal primary education was recognised. In the like spirit it is now proposed to adopt further measures whereby special ability, even when it shows itself in the proposed shows a proposed to allow the proposed to adopt further measures whereby special ability, even when it shows WHEN Mr. WINDIAR'S resolutions for the establishment of grammar schools and scholarships were carried in the Assembly, the Kouse was either drowsy and indifferent, or anxious to get on with some other business, and accordingly the subject received scarcely any attention. Sir William Manning's speech at the commemoration of the University was enough to show that many debatable points will arise when the attempt is made to carry the project into execution. The resolutions embody directions to the Government to place on the Estimates for 1879 certain sums of money for the accomplishment of certain defined purposes; and should the Government comply with these directions, the House will be invited, in due course, to consider whether the money shall be voted or not. But the Chancellor's remarks are of themselves sufficient to raise the question whether, admitting the general aim of the resolutions would gain by the efforts made to obtain it.

that the Turks are to be allowed under the new arrangements to have garrisons on the Balkans, but how this is to be made consistent with their not being permitted to keep any troops in Roumelia, which is the one condition on which the Can consented to the demands of England, does not appear. The giving way of the Cau in the matter of the withdrawal of Russian troops from the neighbourhood of Constantinople was a great loss to Russian diplomacy, and an important gain to that of England. It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of this point. It is said that Lord Braconstrum conditioned the continuance of the Congress, so far as s axinggorate the importance of this point. It is said that Lord Braconstruing conditioned the continuance of the Congress, so far as I England was concerned, on this demand being submitted to. As long as Russian troops occupy the vicinity of Constantinople they have the virtual command of the forts of the Bosphorus and of the Black Sea. As Russia's friendship with Roumania and her understanding with Austria are less certain than they were, and therefore as her means of land communication between her army and the base of her supplies might be less perfect in the future than they have been in the past, it is of the utmost importance to Russia that she should be able to retain a sufficient force near Constantinople to keep an enemy like England, for example, and of the Black Sea. The withdrawal of the Russian troops from Constantinople must mean the leaving of the Bosphorus open in the event of future complications, and that must mean the making of a way for a hostile fleet into the Black Sea. We can quite understand that the plenipoten-tiaries of Russia would deem this part of the business sufficiently important to necessitate their telegraphing to St. Petersburg for instruc-tions, and we can also understand how the tions, and we can also understand how the crisis at the Congress was regarded as over when this matter was settled.

On these points, and on others which might be named, Russia has lost something by the decisions of the Conference. It is settled for example that Russian troops are to leave Bulgaria at the close of nine months, and not at that of two years as the preliminary treaty provided. Again the southern boundary of the new Bulgaria is to be at the Balkans, and the new Bulgaria is to be at the Balkans, and not at Kavala. Besides this, England is to wa get in Asia Minor a recognised position which she had not before. And above all, Rusnia is for the present at least to lose the power of controlling Turkey, which she had commenced to acquire again. The primary object of the Congress was the maintenance of the principle laid down in former treation mamely, that any changes to be made in European Turkey must be made by Europe as a whole, and not by Russia alone. This object has been consistently fought for by England, and in this matter at any rate she has brought?

a whole, and not by Russia alone. This object has been consistently fought for by England, and in this matter at any rate she has brought Russia over to her point of view.

Notwithstanding all this, however, the gain to Russia by the decision of the Powers is ivery much greater than to anybody else. Turkey fought for the continuance of her rule on the north of the Balkans. By the consent of the Congress that rule has now become a thing of the past. She also fought against the enlargement of the area of Russian dominion in Asia Minor, and in this calso she has been worsted. The extension of the new Bulgarian boundary late Roumelia has been bitterly complained of both by Turkey and her champions, but although the new State is to stop at the Balkans, Roumelia is to be converted into an autonomy, and Turkish troops are not to be allowed to be quartered in the province. Sofia is to be included in the new State, not in the autonomous province, and thus an important strategic point is to go out of the hands of Turkey altogether. It is true that Albania is to remain nominally in the hands of the Porte, but Bosnia and the Herzegovinn, where the present disturbance commenced, are to go to Austria in one shape or another.

Europe altogether.

The question that now occurs, and the one that may yet upset all that the Congress has been attempting to do, is—How will Turkey regard all this? Will she quietly concent to the Berlin stipulations, or will she show her teeth once more? It may, of course, be said in answer that Turkey was a consenting party to the Section that the these teeths. to the San Stefano treaty, and that that treaty went much farther than the Congress has gone. There are, however, intimations that the Turks will pay very little regard to considerations like this. At San Stefano them, or to content itself with a general affirmation of principle, and a direction to the Government to prepare a well-digested scheme for carrying it out. As it is, the resolutions, if adhered to, bind the Government to details which may interfere with the preparation of any comprehensive and symmetrical scheme. And the chief use of Sir WILLIAM MANNING's suggestive remarks now is to raise the question—whether the Government would not do well, to cast the details of the resolution aside, to think the question cut as a whole, and to take the responsibility of propounding a scheme of its own, after asselling the navice of the University Senate and the Council of Education?

We are disposed to agree with Sir W. Manning that the scholarships in secondary schools should not be to conferage out the scholarships in secondary schools should not be confined to State grams for the past week can hardly have falled to notice how closely, in some important points, the situation of to-day resembles that of a year and a-half ago. The work which has been done by the Conference which has been done that which has been done by the Conference which has been done that which was proved the power, but went to the last of the set, to the said, is the one great thing in war, has been to the question—whether the Government of the Turkis by provincing the Conference which have, as a transfer of the University Senate and the Council of Education?

We are disposed to agree with Sir W. Manning the Conference which has been done of the Brain has been done of the said, has a hundred thousand men in those of the green population whi so as to distribute the benefits of the new system as widely as possible. It would be expedient that any private school selected or approved for the purpose should submit itself in some measure to State inspection and control; and by this means an advantage might be conferred on both schools and scholars.

We do not, however, concur with Sir W. Manning in the suggestion that the University scholarships should be offered only to those pupils at the Grammar schools or approved private schools, who had been sent up from the of the discussions of the last twelvo months, and we shall be fortunate if it does not lead to further discussions during the next.

PARLIAMENTARY DOCUMENTA — Publicity is pre-sumed to be the life and soul of democratic institu-tions; and that being so, it must be admitted the New South Wales may boast of exuberant vigour. The Government Printing Office is a colosul cub-lishment, and produces an infinite number of publi-cations for the special enlightenment of members of Parliament: but, to do our lecislators (usine the cations for the special enlightenment of members of Parliament; but, to do our legislators justice, there is probably not one in the hundred who reads my considerable number of them. He would be guilty of a most egregious waste of time if he did, for the bulk of these papers are of no real public impertance other than as showing the credulous, casy disposition of narticular members of the Assembly. Who time of particular members of the Assembly, who turn to co-willing car to the representations of interests persons out of doors, and thus discover all sorts of maries-nests. From the last batch of Parlimentary papers to hand we observe that the member for Liverpool Plains has provided himself with a large amount of literature for perusal during the rocess, for it contains not less than five returns ordered by the Assembly at his instance, the preparation, printing, and lithographing of which must have been a very expensive affair. Mr. Bean ett., it is understood, resorted to the plan of sking questions and calling for returns because he could not get information at the Lands Office in the ordinary course of business. MEDICAL EDUCATION IN SYDNEY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD,

common so such the training of colonial needen students.

To the many colonial families who have destined one among their number to enter the ranks of our profession, the attrement that a complete school of mellicien in Sydney is not contemplated for an indefinite period will be learned with disappointment and regret; feelings which will be expecially shared in by those who recognise in the state of the healing art in a country the standard of civilization it has attained to.

The mournial and undecided tones with which Sir William referred to this subject testified to his high appreciation of its importance, as also to an imperfect acquaintance of facts in connection with the subject on the part of the University subtorities.

In sober truth, all who are practically familiar with routine medical education in Europe, and know the peculiarities of calculail life, must admit that in a population of thready quarters of a million a medical school is a necessity not to be dispeased with without retarding civilisation; and that a mixed industrial community like our own contains most of the elements essential for the formation of one equal in efficiency to many of established repute in Europe and America.

They are several British colonies. American States, and than that of New South Wales which have more than one medical college.

Several reasons have, doubtless, had sway in inducing the Sydary University authorities to take so retrogressive a step as to practically abangate for an indefinite period its responsibility in connection with medical education.

When I bear in mind the probably rapid increase in our population, the incossant formation of new towns, the extent and severity of the diseases and accidents incidental to a new country inhabited by an onterprising people, and the difficulty which persons of more or less means experience in findings a vocation for their sons which accords with their views as regards social station while adiodings a shelter from dangers alreadant even on the westithest who start with an indefinite aim in life. I think there must have been causes other than those which appeared in the Characellor's address, which loaduced the Secate to postpone on event which has long been desiderated.

When I had the secant to postpone on event which has long been desiderated our medical standents are likely to be either more cheaply, or better and more complexly trained in European medical schools than in much appear as Sydney, with proper encouragement, could establish is, I am sure, a falmey. Indeed, the majority of the large moiteal schools in the United Kingdom are vanning in a most serious degree in the fundamental parts of medical education, viz., clained instruction.

In their greed to have a large number of students the grogistar more than the number of beds their several hospitals can provide practice for, according to the standard they themselves have set up; the practical result being that a large proportion of the young gentlemen meet the imperfectly defined regulations as regard "hospital practice" (?) by walking the hospitals, a term in many of their cases literally applicable, for little real bedside work have not a few of them even the oppartunity of performing.

Both sides were soon in the thick of it, and it was apparent from the soon in the thick of it, and it was apparent from the soon in the thick of it, and it was apparent from the soon in the thick of it, and it was paparent from the soon in the thick of it, and it was other believe thing imagined. The Carlton obtained two behinds, and kept the ball near their opponents goal. The Warstah, by several judicious free kicks, succeeded in getting the ball up to their adversaries' goal on the north side of the ground, but missed a small mark. However, after play had proceeded about twenty-five minutes, Phillips made a long kick after a tussle and got the ball up to the goal, and it was dribbled through by Mulcahy amid great cheering. After half an hour's more play sides were changed. Carlton missed a chance of getting a 'goal, Henry having a chance of getting a 'goal, Henry having secured a good mark about twenty yards in front. At half-past 4, when the Carltons had been working the ball a good deal towards the Werstah goal, Turnbull made a fine kick and secured a goal. At this time it was even chalks, but just at the close of the day's play, Gunn, of Carlton, got a flying kick about twenty-five yards from the posts and secured a second goal for Carlton. In about go minutes more the game ended, Carlton being victors by one goal. The Warstah played splendid; they were very settive, and all over the field they made things very lively, and never gave the Carlton men a chance. The players who most distinguished themselves for Warstah played splendid for Carlton. The latter, however, were best up in the tactics of the game and in the system of little marks. M'Gill, the Carlton exptain, had his thigh bone broken in a charge segainst one of his own mens and was botne off the ground and taken to the hospital. Melville, another of the Carlton men, received a nasty wound over the eye. The game was very fast, and numberless spills and small casural

The Carlton team, independently of securing two goals to one to-day, had the advantage of thirteen behinds to two. The sum total of the two days play leaves the Carltons winners by one goal, as the goal obtained by them on Saturday, though admitted by the Warstah team under protest is not likely to be alternated.

A match between these two clubs took place on Saturday afternoon, on Moore Park, in the presence of a latge assemblage. The weather was beautifully fine. Play commenced shortly after 3 o'clock, and for a time was closely contented; gradually Redfern (who had the best for weight) after some beautiful play compelled Toxteth to touchdown behind their own goal. Toxteth returned the charge with increased vigour, which they kept up to the hinsh, eventually winning by one touchdown to nil. The fine dashing play of Colins, Smail, Wooler, and Barlow (for Toxteth), and Dalton, Strong, and Usher (for Redfern), evoked special attention.

The Coursier now args it has proved a miscrable failure. During 1877, the Government only issued two insurance policies, and at the end of the year the total number of insurance policies in force was thirty-five, and of annuity policies, two, one of which has since been surrendered. The liability of the Government on account of insurance policies now amounts to £340°, and on account of annuities, to one contract for £50 per sanum, payable from and after the 12th September, 1889. The sum to the credit of these funds on the 31st December was £776, and the Sayings Bank allowed interest on these funds, by which this income on insurance and annuity business for the year was increased by £27. The year's income from account of the year's business amounting to £142. Against this, the only charge appears to be the small sum of 10s., which represents fees paid to officers on completion of mey policies, 5s. being all lowed them, by a rule of the department, or every ins urance policy accepted. The above information is taken from the last report on this subject by Mr. C nillen, Under-Secretary for the Treasury. Jules Simon, and the invitations will, we understand, be issued in the name of the Government of the Republic. The primary object of the meeting, of course, will be to consider the jmeetine system in relation to weights and measures and to coinage; but it appears that some collateral questions of no little interest will also come a under discussion. One will be the difference in the relative proportion of alloy to the subject which should, be maintained between subject which should, be maintained between gold, and silver. The States of the Latin Union have taken the basis, of one to should not be maintained between gold, and silver. The States of the Latin that is to say, silver, in order to be qual in value to gold, must weigh sixteen times more; while in England the proportion between the whole weight saken a new departure of their some should color in their meetally currency a double standard of gold and silver. As interesting lietter from General Todleben, to General Brialmont, on the siege of Pleyna, is published by the Journal dis Genie. Last December, General Brialmont, in his own name and in that of General Brialmont, in his own name and in that of Todleben on the fall of Pleyna; and the latter in expressing his thanks for General Brialmont's communication, enclosed a plan of the Russian and Turkish positions and a description of the siege. The letter concludes as follows:—"A thrat our troops approached Pleyna simultaneously with the Turks, but on the St. of July we'were forced to retire before overwhelming forces. The enemy at once began to fortify the position, and he continued to do so with extraordinary energy and activity for several months. We wished to take Pleyna by assault at any cost; but our stakeds on the 18th of July and the 20th of August were standed by a most terrible and murderous fire. The enemy of did not show the smallest approaches met with an bottinate resistance. To take them by auprise was impossible; all our partial attacks were at once answered by a most terrible and murderous fire. The enemy of all on the south as all was regarded as the only means of putting an end to the resistance at Pleyna. But I opposed this increased by the news of the storming of Kars. An and the prisoners were well clad and nourished. But, according to all the accounts which reached me, the middle of December. The winter was approaching; our people grew impatient, and their impatience was provisions in the town could not last longer than the impatience was provisions in the town could not last longer than the impatience was provisions in the town could not last longer than the impatience was provisions in the town could not last longer than the impatience was provisions in the town could not last longer than the impatience was provisions in the town could not last longer than the impatience was p
